'92 Chevrolet Lumina Z34 overheats and overcools? Bought used in December. Chronically overcooled coolant. Gauge showed between 100 and 120 degrees on road. Replaced thermostat, now needle ranges from 120 to 250. As best I can tell gauge is correct. I've discovered that coolant temp. is dependent on rpm level.

I have 1999 Chevy Lumina that has 210,000 miles on it. This car runs like a champ. I get about 20 miles per gallon city. On the highway I get about 25 MPG. There was only one cup holder in the car. I installed a center CD and cup holder piece and it worked out well. I did put some money in to this car. Really nothing more than regular maintenance.
