Flowers Fall is a translation of, and commentary on, Eihei Dogen's (1200-1253) Genjokoan. The Genjokoan was originally written in mid-autumn, the first year of the Tempuku Era [1233], and given to his lay student Kosho Yo of Kyushu Island. The text was subsequently revised in the fourth year of the Kencho Era [1252].

It's wholly appropriate, then, that this translation of the commentary by Yasutani Roshi, a major figure in bringing Zen to the West, was one of the first available to English speaking audiences. Yasutani Roshi elucidates Dogen's teaching on the nature of practice, enlightenment, and the buddhaway in his characteristically sharp but grounded style.

In sports broadcasting, a sports commentator (also known as sports announcer, sportscaster or play-by-play announcer) gives a running commentary of a game or event in real time, usually during a live broadcast, traditionally delivered in the historical present tense. Radio was the first medium for sports broadcasts, and radio commentators must describe all aspects of the action to listeners ...

It is likely that 'Fall, Leaves, Fall' constitutes one of few existing commentaries on who Emily Brontë was as a person. In her life, friends and family described her as a shy individual, but most of what is known about her come from the posthumous commentaries of her older sister, Charlotte Brontë, whose neutrality cannot, of course, be assured.
